

NEW YORK

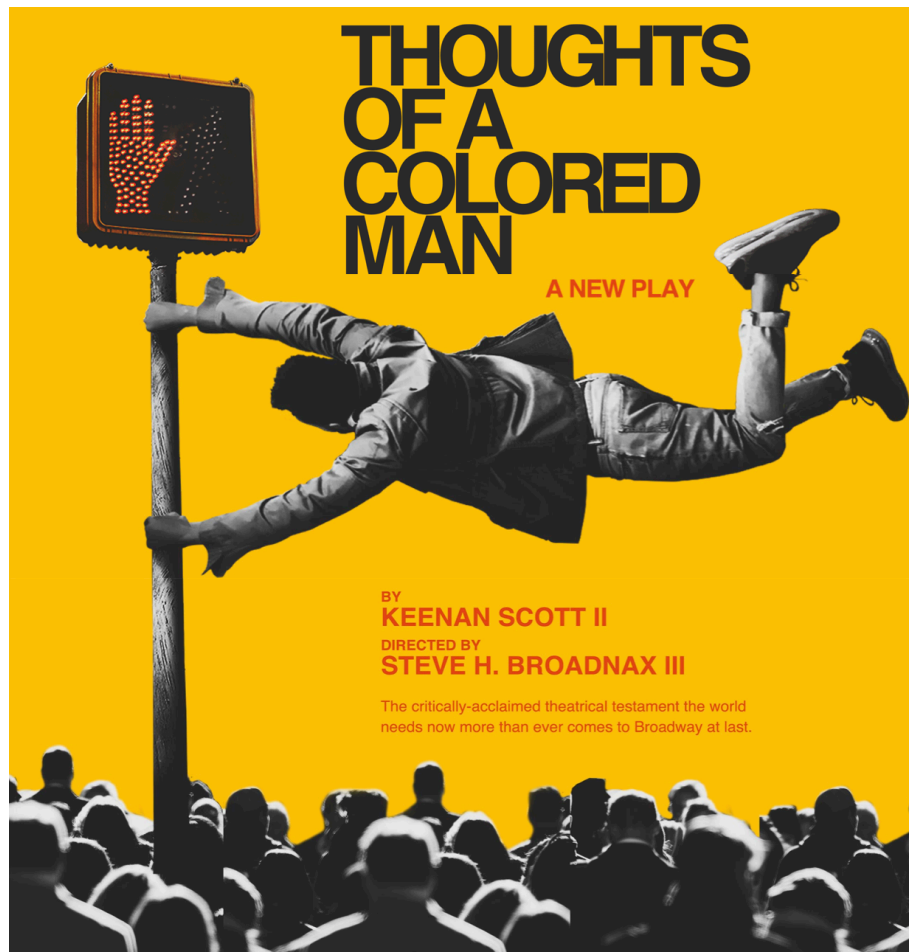

By Helen Shaw
September 2021

VULTURE

FALL PREVIEW 2021 | 11:00 A.M.

22 New and Returning Theater Performances to See This Fall

Live, in-person theater has been keeping its power dry for the last 18 months, premiering works online or simply staying silent. Now that it's safe-ish to return, the theater season this fall contains a number of explosions-in-waiting — pieces we've been looking forward to for ages — and new works that have used that time to rewire the form. Here are the shows we think will have the biggest blast radius.

October

Thoughts of a Colored Man

John Golden Theater, 10/1 Keenan Scott II's play uses poetic monologues and casual banter alike to create a three-dimensional portrait of Black manhood in America.